

IT'S SUMMER AT THE OSM!

THE ORCHESTRA HAS ALWAYS BEEN AN ESSENTIAL PART OF THE GREAT TRADITION OF SUMMER FESTIVITIES IN MONTREAL. THIS SUMMER IS NO EXCEPTION!

Montreal, June 29, 2020— The Orchestre symphonique de Montréal is thrilled to unveil its summer season with the launch of two exciting projects. Fun and conviviality are the order of the day with OSM Summer in the City, where small ensembles of musicians come together to present close to sixty outdoor surprise performances. And there's more: starting tomorrow, André Robitaille will host Never Too Classical, a weekly cultural program of classical music in all its various forms. Enjoy summer music immersion with the OSM!

Whether in the parks, at the foot of emblematic monuments or in the Greater Montreal's long term care institutions, musicians of the OSM will meet every week to form small ensembles, offering the public impromptu musical performances with the aim of bringing Montreal back to life while serving the better good. We are pleased to collaborate with the City of Montreal and its boroughs, as well as with the Office municipal d'habitation de Montréal (the city's municipal housing office) and Montreal's 5 CIUSSS (university health and social services centres).

An OSM string quartet delighted residents of the J-Henri Charbonneau Accommodation Center in the Mercier Hochelaga Maisonneuve borough, while a brass quartet kicked off the initiative in the Rosemont-La Petite-Patrie.

The OSM also joins forces with several of Montreal's cultural institutions with the participation of a host of Quebec artists, to offer citizens a melding of classical music with several other performance arts, such as dance, circus, and literature, among others. These unique performances feature an awaited association between dancer-choreographer Louise Lecavalier and the OSM's Associate Principal Cello Anna Burden. Music and literature intertwine with Sophie Cadieux and Mani Soleymanlou, thanks to the collaboration of the Festival international de la littérature (FIL). And for the first time ever, the Orchestra joins MONTRÉAL PRESQUE COMPLÈTEMENT CIRQUE, A TOHU festival, where circus artists and two ensembles of OSM musicians make short pop-up appearances for passers-by. Culture lives again in our neighbourhoods!

All these events respect social distancing standards in place. Health and safety remain our priority!

A featured borough will be revealed each week on our social networks! However, the specific locations will remain surprises—to avoid gatherings!
